WELLMAN IS ON THE WAY

To Spitzbergen, from Where He Will Make Another Attempt to Fly to the Pole

Christiana, May 22.—With the sailing from Christiansand, Norway, yesterday of the new motor ship Arctic, the first move has been made by Walter Wellman for another attempt to "dash" to the north pole in a dirigible balloon. The vessel, which was launched only this spring, is bound for Danes Island, Spitzbergen, and that place is to be the rendezvous of the Wellman expedition party. Besides a crew of a dozen men, the Arctic carried a score of foremen and mechanics and all the gas plant and supply post to be established on the bleak and barren coast of Spitzbergen.

The Chicago newspaper which announced Mr. Wellman's earlier polar-dashing expedition, which expedited only in the newspapers, has tired of the game and the coming dash will be under Mr. Wellman's individual direction. The sinews of war have been supplied by Americans who believe that the project is feasible and are backing the former journalist with all the necessary money.

The balloon will start from Danes Island, Spitzbergen, in August, if weather conditions are favorable. The airship will be the "America," which had a trial in a voyage of about twenty miles at Spitzbergen a year ago last September.

The owners have turned over to Mr. Wellman, free of charge, the airship, plant, building and machinery of Mr. Wellman's former enterprise. The "America" is the second largest airship being about three-fifths the size of the Zeppelin. It has a lifting capacity of nearly ten tons.

If the America is able to start next August upon her voyage of 700 miles through the air to the pole, she will carry a crew of three men, 6,000 pounds of gasoline for the engines, food for a year, sledges, dogs, life-boats and all the requisites of an exploring party. A member of the crew will be Chief Engineer Valman, an American, who was in charge of the ship's engines during her trial voyage in 1907. The third member has not been selected.

BACKSLIDING OF BEARD

The Senator from Escambia has a Grouch and Will Work Against State-Wide Prohibition

Tallahassee, May 22.—Senator John S. Beard, a leading prohibitionist when the campaign opens will probably stump Escambia county in favor of local option and against state-wide prohibition.

Mr. Beard's hobby has been his disfranchisement bill, which he alleged, was killed in the house by the prohibitionists, who believed that if Beard's bill passed it would bring to the polls a large negro vote, which would oppose state-wide prohibition.

Mr. Beard will, it is said, canvass Escambia county thoroughly, which he predicts will give 2,000 majority against prohibition.

BACK GIVES OUT

Plenty of Ocala Readers Have This Experience
You tax the kidneys—overwork them. They can't keep up the continual strain.

The back gives out—it aches and pains. Urinary troubles set in. Don't wait longer—take Doan's Kidney Pills.

P. P. Anick, Elm St., Sanford, Fla., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and can say that they are a superior kidney remedy. My work brings quite a strain on the back and as a result, I suffered a great deal from backache. I would become so lame at times that I could hardly straighten and mornings upon arising could just about get around. I tried plasters and liniments but the relief they brought was only slight and temporary. When I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills, I obtained a box and found that they acted just as represented. When I had used the contents of this box the backache had ceased and my back felt stronger."

Plenty more proof like this from Ocala people. Call at Tydings & Co's drug store and ask what their customers report.

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

BRAVE MRS. LONGSTREET

Widow of the Famous Confederate General Routed a Burglar

Gainesville, Ga., May 22.—Awakened at an early hour yesterday to find a burglar in her home on her farm two miles from Gainesville, Mrs. James Longstreet, the aged widow of the famous Confederate general, opened fire on the intruder, causing him to leave the house post haste and abandon his booty as he fled. Mrs. Longstreet heard the burglar in the dining room, which adjoins her bedroom. Quietly arising from her bed she seized a revolver and tiptoed down the room. There a man was busily engaged in stowing away the family plate in a sack. She immediately opened fire, shooting five times.

THE CAPTAIN OF THE KANSAS

A Story of Love and Adventure on the Little Known Coast of Southwestern America

(By Louis Tracy.)

rassing into the deck corridor, she heard the captain's voice, apparently at a considerable distance. Two hundred yards away from the ship Courtenay and Tollemache were anchoring a flat framework built of spare hatchets and secured by wooden crosspieces. On it stood the first of the infernal machines. The raft floated level with the water, so its only conspicuous feature ting was a small spar and a block, to which a line and an iron bar were attached. The men looked strange in her eyes at that distance. In the marvellously clear light she could see their features distinctly, and when Courtenay shouted to a sailor to haul in the slack of the line she caught a trumpet-like ring that recalled the scene in the salon when he held back the mob of stewards. His athletic figure, silhouetted against the shimmering green of the water, was instinct with graceful strength. He looked a born leader of men, and, as though to mark his quickness of observation, no sooner had Elsie glanced over the side of the ship than he waved a hand to her.

She sighed. A bitter thought peeped up in her that he was perhaps a trifle careless in showing her these little attentions. She wished he would speak to her of that other girl who awaited him in England. A pleasant state of confidence would be established then. These secret twitches of sentiment were irritating.

She walked aft to obtain a nearer view of the operations. The sailors had already shut in a large portion of the promenade deck with canvas, and she noticed that loopholes were provided every ten feet or so to permit the effective use of the defenders' firearms. Thus at each step she was reminded of the precarious hold she had on life, and she was positively frightened when some mad impulse surged through her whole being, bidding her imperiously to abandon her ultra conscientious loyalty to a woman she had never seen. Why struggle against circumstance? If death were so near, what did she gain by prudery?

For an instant she stood aghast at the revelation which had come to her. She was in love with Courtenay. She was ready to die by his side, fearless and joyous, if only he would put his arms around her and tell her that she was dear to him. Ah, the fierce delight of that first silent surrender! Her heart beat as it had never pulsed before, even under the stress of the storm or the sudden terror of the night attack. Her eyes shone, and her breath came laboriously between parted lips. Golden dreams coursed through her brain. She was thrilled with an unutterable longing.

Then her swimming eyes rested on a group of men standing on the poop. Among them was Christobal, interested, like the rest, in the floating of the mine. And forthwith Elsie fell from the clouds and was brought back, shuddering, to cold reason again. She was sick at heart. She hated herself for her self-abasement. She must guard her with sackcloth and mourn, and the fight must be fought now without parley or hesitation unless the sweetness were to go forth from life forever and all things turn to ashes in her mouth.

So, marshaling the best qualities of her womanhood, she quelled the turmoil in her breast, forced herself to join the men on the after deck and said when the smiling Spaniard turned to receive her:

"Where do they mean to put the second contrivance?"

"About there," he said, indicating a point on the surface of the bay eastward of the canoe. His right arm was extended, and he placed his left hand on her shoulder. Courtenay, halting Walker, saw the two leaning over the rails in that attitude. Perhaps one of the two hoped that Courtenay would see them. Elsie, as part of her punishment, did not shrink away, though the touch of Christobal's hand made her flesh creep. But Joey, whose mind was singularly free from complexities, leaped up at her. He wanted Elsie to tell him what Courtenay was doing out there, so far away from the ship. She stooped and picked him up. Christobal
